Dr. Oliver Sacks, renown neurologist, came to understand that his main job was to preserve the identity (soul or self) of his patients, no matter what their brain disorder. He witnessed the sparkle of the soul through his patients' eyes when they heard music, read poetry, danced, painted, and viewed works of art.

One of our jobs as human beings and care managers is to keep each other safe, comfortable, and happy. But most important, our job is to aid in the preservation of our identities—our souls; we do this best by continuing to learn and by sharing our knowledge and skills with others.
